Famous Dummy Has More Thrills Than Stunt Men

ALEXANDRIA, VA.—His face is dark, misshapen. His hair, black and matted, clings in sparse clumps to his head. His one hand has no fingers and his eyes stare with a blankness that's disconcerting.

His place of abode is high in the windswept cupola of an Alexandria apartment building, where he hangs from a piece of electric wire, gazing blankly across the city.

But don't waste any pity on him. He's a dummy, but probably the most famous dummy in the history of this city and near-by Washington.

His years have been filled with more thrills than those of a score of movie stunt men. He's been thrown from a racing car, hanged by his neck twice from Washington bridges, behaved by firemen who thought he was a drunken arsonist, and has scared more people than one could count.

Plagued By Jokers

His apartment address is atop the Belle Haven apartments, where he has lived—except for minor interruptions caused by local jokers and newspapermen—since 1937.

He was put together as a fisherman in an exhibit in the Jamestown (Va.) fair that year and after the exposition the government stored him in the building.

The dummy was discovered by employes of a spark plug factory, then occupying the building, in 1914. Wirecarer set him up in a third floor window to act as night watchman.

His latest, and last, piece of haberdashery, according to John Loughran, owner of the building, was presented to him by the local police. It's a cop's blouse, complete with buttons and traffic insignia.

Seems the police had an objectionable citizen in one of their cells one night and scared the daylight out of him by placing the dummy, dressed as a policeman, in the cell. The citizen, it is said, has been an exemplary one since.

Fooled Husband

People fainted along Washington's main street when a pair of fortified newspaper reporters tossed the dummy into the gutter and sped away screaming at the top of their lungs.

Police were called to cut down (guess who) from under Taft bridge. Again the dummy was pronounced a suicide when he was found dangling by the neck from a girder beneath Memorial bridge.

Once a wag placed the dummy at the table of a lovely Washington lady who was waiting for her ever loving and jealous husband on the terrace of a fashionable hotel.

Hubby saw the pair and promptly shot the dummy through the heart. No one was arrested.

By now the police are used to the dummy's habit of turning up in unusual places. But they've grown quite fond of him and promptly return him to his hook when they find he has strayed.

St. Bernard Dogs Resume Old Keg-Toting Chores

PARIS, FRANCE—After a lapse of nearly 50 years, the dogs of the hospice of St. Bernard in the Alpine snows are to be equipped again with the little kegs of liquor to wear in their rescue work. The St. Bernard dogs, famous in story and cartoon the world over, were relieved of the liquor barrels in 1900.

In the last year, so many persons have been lost in the Alps that the monks of the hospice have decided to restore the liquor. It is not brandy, and never was, but marc, a cheap distillation of grape skins or a sweet beverage distilled by the monks from herbs grown in the valley below their monastery.

Sometime ago a party of 30 Italians seeking to enter France, where they hoped to find employment, were stranded in the St. Bernard pass and were rescued by the dogs. Wives, two monks carrying flasks to revive the half frozen travelers arrived later, some of the party were in bad condition.

The dogs used now are not of the St. Bernard breed, but a cross breed, part bulldog, part terrier and part Pyrenees shepherd.

Elizabeth, Philip to Get Hunting Lodge in Africa

LONDON, ENGLAND. — Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh will get a $3,600 hunting lodge in darkest Africa.

A government announcement said Kenya colony in British East Africa had decided to build the lodge as a wedding present for the couple who have been married some two years.

The lodge will stand on the lower slopes of 17,040-foot Mount Kenya. There is good fishing in the river just beyond the front yard and big game is not far away.

The building project is no "hurry-up" job. The London announcement said there was no indication at present of any projected visit of her royal highness to Kenya.

Babies May Start Thinking Three Months Before Birth

PHILADELPHIA.—If man's development follows the pattern of the lower animals, he begins to think, or his brain is at least ready to start thinking, three months before birth.

That this might be true is indicated in researches reported by Dr. Louis B. Flexner of the American Philosophical Society.

Dr. Flexner studied the nerve cells of the gray matter of the brains of guinea pigs at various stages in their prebirth development. About two-thirds of the way through the prebirth period, a series of "abrupt changes" occurred in the nerve cell.

Nerve processes started to grow rapidly. The volume of the nucleus of each cell stopped increasing. An enzyme believed to have a useful energy-yielding activity increased sharply to the adult level of activity. Other enzymes responsible in part for the combustion of foodstuffs, increased rapidly to the adult level.

At the same period the nerve cells for the first time are electrically active.

Great Rusk Shortage Keeps British Dads Walking Floor

LONDON, ENGLAND.—Because of a great rusk shortage, British fathers of young babies are walking the floor these nights.

The 10,000-member union of small shopkeepers complained of the situation in an urgent telegram to the ministry of food.

The union said the government ought to issue more raw materials to rusk manufacturers right away. The shortage, it was said, is upsetting the peace of households "at a time when fathers should be having a good night's sleep ready for a good day's work."

It looked like fathers would keep pacing the floor, however, for the food ministry consulted dieticians and announced: "Rusks are not essential for human feeding."
